International and Global Studies Minor

US and the World Paths

Associated Project Centers: All international project centers

Description: Because the U.S. has had tremendous global reach during the twentieth century, many courses related to the U.S. can count toward an International Studies major or minor and all international project centers could be related.

A global project and three courses from the humanities and arts or social science requirements may count towards the minor. Double-counted courses may be counted anywhere across the International and Global Studies “core” or “electives.” Students must take the senior seminar (INTL 4100) and two other courses for this minor that do not count for another degree requirement.

Here are several examples of a Sustainable Development and the Developing World track. These are merely examples and the courses you choose could be different.

1 unit International and Global Core
- INTL 1100 Introduction to International and Global Studies
- ID 2050 Social Science Research for the IQP
- INTL 4100 Senior Seminar in International and Global Studies

1 unit Humanities & Arts or Social Science courses (pick any 3 courses)
- HI 1313: The US and the World
- HI 2316: Twentieth Century American Foreign Relations
- HI 2315: America Since 1920
- HI 2322: Modern European History
- HI 2341: Contemporary World Issues in Historical Perspective
- HI 3316/3317 Topics in Environmental History/American History (check with instructor)
- GOV 1301: American Public Policy
- GOV 1320: Topics in International Politics
- GOV 2302: Science-Technology Policy
- GOV 2312: International Environmental Policy
- GOV 2319: Global Environmental Politics
- ENV 210X: Ethical Roots of Environmental Policy
- EN 1257: Introduction to African American Literature And Culture

IQP at an Overseas Project Center

Reminder: There are many ways to mix and match courses to count for International Studies. This is just one possible course trajectory. You don’t need to follow a “track” to do the minor.

Also Please Note: Many HU 3900 Inquiry Seminars fall into the US and World category but can’t count toward an International Studies major or minor. Please consult the instructor.
